

England seems to be a primary giftor to US institutions, ranking #1 for the number of gifts given and #2 for the total amount of money given. The biggest gifting organization to UVA is also headquartered in England. By the metric of total amount given, Qatar comes in 1st. By the metric of who gives the biggest gifts on average, Bermuda is 1st. Other big giftors are China, Canada, Japan, and Saudi Arabia. Institutions should focus on these countries to maintain positive contracts and relations with. Speaking of institutions, the institutions who received the largest gifts and the most gifts are unsurprisingly primarily Ivy League schools such as Cornell and other highly prestigious schools like UCLA and Carnegie Mellon. The mean for the total amount received by all schools is roughly $52,202,878. However, the median is $6,486,791, which is far lower than the mean. This suggests the presence of large outliers, likely much bigger gifts given to Ivy league and prestigious schools.

UVA ranks in the top 1/3 of schools in terms of foreign gift money received, sitting at #100 out of 318 schools. UVA received $22,189,238 in total, placing it below the average of all schools but above the median. The biggest gifting country to UVA is Bangladesh, who gifted a total of $4,228,589 to UVA. Other big giftors are Sweden, Tanzania, and Switzerland. The biggest gifting organization to UVA is AstraZeneca, a pharmaceutical and biotechnology company located in England. Other big gifting organizations are also in the field of medicine, such as the International Center for Diarrheal Disease and Haydom Luther Hospital. In comparison to other Virginia institutions, UVA comes in 3rd, behind Virginia Commonwealth university in 1st and George Mason university in 2nd.

UVA should firstly focus on maintaining strong relations with Bangladesh and England where AstraZeneca is located. UVA should also expand and strengthen their school of medicine and medical research to earn the favor of overseas medical research organizations and biomedical companies. UVA should learn what works from fellow Virginia schools VCU and GMU to boost their relations with current giftors and form partnerships with new giftors.
